Yale's blue-caped band took a central position in the blue stand and began to toot. Yale undergrads hummed the air

SECOND HALF.

The gridiron was smooth as a billiard table, with fresh chalk lines. In the middle was a little pile of dust the heighth of a man's hand, ready to hold the pigskin at the momentous instant of the kickoff. There was a fascination about that dirt pile. It was like the initial letter at the beginning of an exciting story.

Yale's blue-caped band took a central

Dunlop Knocked Out.

And after that came "Boola." No Yale game ever starts or ends without "Boola." They sing it when Yale is winning with a sarcastle ring.

When things go hard for the builded they sing it with a roar, and between halves Yale sings "Boola" just for amusement and to pass the time away.

Time was close now. The bleachers were nearly full. Suddenly the Yale band struck up "Fair Harvard," and with the best nature in the world Harvard, across on the other canyon side, sang to Yale's music. When the song was finished the Blue rooters rose and roared a cheer for Harvard. Harvard gave nine 'rahs and topped it with a shout of "Yale! Yale! Yale!"

Crimson Team Appears.

And just then the Crimson team myrapped like Indians in gaudy blankets, trotted out on the field. Yale came after them in their blue jerseys, stripped for action. Saddenly both Yale and Harvard stands burst into a ripping wave of color. Ten thousand flags came from concealment and fluttered on the breeze.

Both teams began.warming up. While bands claimored and 30,000 spectators cheered and whopped and yelled and stamped their feet on the platform underneath Yale began singing. Want Action Now. "We are here to get action of some sort. So far we have failed, but by Monday we will have formulated our demands in such shape that they will call for a definite answer."

ent telephoned the Mayor this morning that he thought it very likely that some of the workmen might be dug out alive. The Mayor went to the scene of the rescue work this afternoon and saw how it was progressing. He said that he would not begin an investigation on behalf of the city administration, as the contractor had been agreeted, and he thought, It was a case for the Grand Jury.

At 3.30 o'clock this morning an effort was made by the police to get at the number of dead or missing, but this was impossible. In the crowds that pressed close to the workmen were women who said their husbands had not come home; there were mothers who had missed their sons, and they were ready to believe that the bodies of the morning and talking things over in Grand not come home; there were mothers who had missed their sons, and they were ready to believe that the bodies of the morning and talking things over in Grand Master.
